INTRODUCTION TO THE HATE ON DISPLAY HATE SYMBOLS DATABASE

ADL is the leading anti-hate organization in the world. Founded in 1913, its timeless mission is “to stop the defamation of the Jewish people and to secure justice and fair treatment to all.” Today, ADL continues to fight all forms of antisemitism and bias, using innovation and partnerships to drive impact. A global leader in combating antisemitism, countering extremism and battling bigotry wherever and whenever it happens, ADL works to protect democracy and ensure a just and inclusive society for all.

ADL Center on Extremism debuted its Hate on Display hate symbols database in 2000, establishing the database as the first and foremost resource on the internet for symbols, codes, and memes used by white supremacists and other types of haters. Over the past two decades, Hate on Display has regularly been updated with new symbols and images as they have come into common use by extremists, as well as new functions to make it more useful and convenient for users.

Although the database contains many examples of online usage and shared graphics, another feature that makes it unique is its emphasis on real world examples of hate symbols—showing them as extremists actually use them: on signs and clothing, graffiti and jewelry, and even on their own bodies as tattoos and brands.

Readers of this document and users of the Hate on Display database should be aware that this database, by its nature, contains racist and antisemitic imagery and language that some may find offensive.

IMPORTANT NOTE ABOUT THIS DOCUMENT

No one who encounters one of the symbols listed in this database should rush to judgment. All symbols depicted here must be evaluated carefully in the context in which they appear. Few symbols represent just one idea or are used exclusively by one group. For example, one version of the Celtic Cross symbol is frequently used by white supremacists, but the Celtic Cross is also widely used by people and groups that are not racist. Similarly, other symbols in this database may be used in certain contexts by people who are not extreme or racist. The descriptions here point out significant non-hateful meanings and contexts but may not be able to relay every possible meaning of a particular symbol.

ZYKLON B

Zyklon B was the name of the gas used to kill over a million victims, most of them Jews, in the death camps constructed by Nazi Germany during the Holocaust. ABOUT THIS DOCUMENT

All the symbols depicted here must be evaluated in the context in which they appear. Few symbols represent just one idea or are used exclusively by one group. For example, the Confederate Flag is a symbol that is frequently used by white supremacists, but which also has been used by people and groups that are not racist. Similarly, other symbols in this database may be significant to people who are not extreme or racist. The descriptions here point out significant multiple meanings but may not be able to relay every possible meaning of a particular symbol.
