

SECURITY RESOURCES FOR RELIGIOUS AND COMMUNAL INSTITUTIONS

About the Anti-Defamation League (ADL)

ADL is a civil rights and human relations organization, founded in 1913, to fight anti-Semitism and secure justice and fair treatment to all. ADL has been a leading provider of security resources for religious and communal institutions for decades. Headquartered in New York, ADL has a staff of 300 and a network of 28 Regional and Satellite Offices in the United States and abroad.

ADL's Security Resources

ADL offers a comprehensive suite of security related information and products.

- Training: Learn How To Assess Risks, Manage Crises, and Develop Security Plans
ADL provides local training to religious and communal institutions to assist them in the security planning process. Trainings provide information on: physical security and operations, situational awareness and suspicious activity reporting, mailroom security, cyber-security, and more.
- ADL's Guide to Protecting Your Religious and Communal Institutions
ADL's guide Protecting Your Religious and Communal Institutions was created to help security planners at all types of religious and communal institutions.
- ADL's Center on Extremism: The Recognized Authority on Hate
ADL's Center on Extremism is staffed with the nation's leading experts on domestic extremism, terrorism, organized hate groups and hate crimes. The Center continually monitors and reports on threats to communities and our democracy.
- Law Enforcement Outreach: Connecting You With Law Enforcement
ADL has developed an unparalleled set of relationships with law enforcement officials across the country. Among other benefits, this enables your ADL regional office to connect your religious or communal institution with relevant local, state and federal law enforcement leaders.
- Regional Offices: Your Point of Contact With ADL in Your Local Community
ADL is on-the-ground in your community, with customized trainings and local investigators and analysts.
